Here's what you need to know:

- On Capitol Hill.

A Senate vote expected today on amendments to the bill giving Congress a say over the Iran nuclear deal is now off, after a procedural move cut off debate on Tuesday.

Republicans and Democrats alike are upset with Senator Tom Cotton, a first-term Republican from Arkansas, and Senator Marco Rubio of Florida, who used the arcane maneuver. A full vote may now take place on Thursday.

But the Senate did pass, 51 to 48, its first joint budget resolution since 2009. It outlines deep cuts over the next 10 years to eliminate deficits.

- Four Afghan men sentenced to death.

An Afghan judge today convicted four men for their role in the mob killing of a woman in Kabul in March. She was falsely accused of burning the Quran.

The judge sentenced eight other defendants to 16 years in prison and dropped charges against 18. Violence against women in Afghanistan often goes unpunished.

- Israeli leader's deadline.

Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu must put together a governing coalition today or face the prospect of being forced out of office by day's end.

His party won elections in March, but he needs to secure a 61-seat majority in the 120-seat Parliament to avoid having the president give someone else the job.

- Reparations for police victims.

The Chicago City Council is expected today to pass a reparations package for scores of victims — most of them black — of police torture in the 1970s and 1980s.

- Germanwings crash report.

French investigators concluded that a Germanwings co-pilot tried a controlled descent on a previous flight in their preliminary report on March 24 plane crash in the French Alps that killed 150 people.

- The quiet ally.

Djibouti, about the size of New Jersey and with a population of less than one million, gets a personal thank you today from Secretary of State John Kerry.

The strategically important country on the Horn of Africa is the launching pad for U.S. drone attacks on regional militant groups.

NOTEWORTHY

- The lives of musicians.

Mariah Carey begins a residency tonight at Caesars Palace, performing her 18 No. 1 hits in each concert.

She joins Celine Dion, Britney Spears and Rod Stewart, among others, who are taking advantage this year of Las Vegas's traditionally lengthy gigs.

- Where the grass is greenest.

Barcelona plays Bayern Munich today in the first leg of their Champions League semifinal, after Real Madrid lost, 2-1, to Juventus on Tuesday night.

Which goes to show that money isn't everything. The two Spanish teams, Real Madrid \(\$3.4 billion\) and Barcelona \(\$3.2 billion\), led Forbes's 2014 list of the world's most valuable soccer teams. (The 2015 list comes out today.)

By comparison, the Dallas Cowboys, the most valuable team in the U.S., is worth $3.2 billion.

- Our feathered friend.

"I Am Big Bird," a documentary out today, is about Carroll Spinney, who has played Big Bird and Oscar the Grouch on "Sesame Street" since 1969.

- Way, way out there.

Astronomers have discovered a galaxy that is farther away in distance and time than ever before seen.

It's 30 billion light-years away. (A light-year is 5.8 trillion miles.) And it dates to about 670 million years after the Big Bang.

BACK STORY

Orson Welles was born 100 years ago today. A movie, radio and stage wunderkind, he was all of 26 years old when he presented his masterpiece.

That was "Citizen Kane," No. 1 on the American Film Institute's 100 best American movies list.

Welles helped write, directed, and starred in the picture, which is based very loosely — and not very kindly — on the life of the newspaper mogul William Randolph Hearst.

In a sometimes self-destructive career, Welles ranged from Shakespearean actor to magician and talk-show guest.

His true love was radio, though, and he's still famous for his 1938 CBS Radio adaptation of "The War of the Worlds" (written by that other Wells, H. G.).

Reports of widespread panic by listeners who believed Martians had really landed, however, seem to have been greatly exaggerated.

Orson Welles worked until he died in 1985, leaving many projects unfinished.

One of them, the film "The Other Side of the Wind," is the subject of a new book by Josh Karp. The story is about a has-been film director, but Welles said it wasn't autobiographical.

We may yet see it. Peter Bogdanovich, another film polymath, has promised to complete it.
